

Collective Strength— The Power of Small Contributions

Our work at Arike is filled with moments that touch the very core of our being, moments that remind us why we dedicate ourselves to palliative care. We remember an elderly mother, from a family struggling with poverty, whom we cared for in her own home for a long time. Our team grew deeply fond of her, ensuring she received the best possible care, completely sponsored, free of charge. Despite her hardships, her spirit and the genuine gratitude she showed us each day were a constant source of inspiration. When she passed away, her daughter came to our office, her eyes filled with tears, and placed a small envelope in our hands. Inside was a donation of ₹500. But it wasn't the amount that moved us, it was the story behind it. The mother, before she passed, had asked her daughter to give this money to Arike as a way to express her heartfelt thanks for the care we had given her.

This simple act, this deeply personal offering, revealed the profound impact of even the smallest gestures of generosity. It demonstrated how even a little can mean so much. It's a reminder that every contribution, regardless of its size, holds immense value. At Arike, we rely on the collective kindness of individuals to sustain our mission. These seemingly small contributions, when combined, enable us to provide vital medical care, emotional support, and nutritional assistance to bedridden patients. They allow us to train caregivers and family members, ensuring they can provide high-quality care. And they empower us to advocate for palliative care as a fundamental human right. The ₹500 from the daughter of our beloved patient serves as a powerful testament to the fact that every act of giving truly matters. It fuels our dedication, knowing we are making a real difference in the lives of those we serve. We invite you to join us in our mission to provide compassionate care to those in need. Your support, no matter how modest, can be a catalyst for change, allowing us to reach more patients and families, enhance our services, and advocate for policy changes that prioritize palliative care. Together, we can create a ripple effect of kindness and compassion, bringing us closer to our vision of providing holistic care to those who need it most. Thank you for being a part of the Arike family.

Arike's Role in International Palliative Care Learning

Ms. Emmy, a nursing professional from the UK, traveled to Arike to gain in-depth knowledge of Kerala's renowned community-based palliative care model. This model, celebrated globally, is built upon a robust network of dedicated community volunteers and skilled healthcare professionals. It emphasizes comprehensive home-based psychosocial support for patients and their families, significantly reducing costs through volunteer involvement. Crucially, our model reinforces community responsibility in caring for bedridden individuals, ensuring regular monitoring and compassionate companionship. The model's success is further strengthened by collaboration between government sectors, NGOs, and private hospitals. Recognizing its effectiveness, the Kerala model is being replicated in various regions. Arike facilitated Ms. Emmy's learning through immersive field visits, including home care observations and detailed explanations of its activities.

Awareness Session

In February 2025, Arike significantly expanded its outreach, conducting 17 palliative care awareness sessions that reached 502 individuals and families. These sessions aimed to deepen understanding of palliative care, emphasizing its focus on enhancing quality of life for those facing serious illnesses, and clarifying its distinction from curative treatments and hospice care. Participants gained insights into holistic, patient-centered approaches, effective symptom management, and ethical considerations. These sessions also inspired community members to engage in palliative care volunteering and facilitated access to community resources. Furthermore, the initiatives enhanced networking among community members, patients, and healthcare professionals, fostering a stronger support system.
