Nallapaadam 3.0: Supporting Young Learners

Three years ago, Ariake Palliative Care launched a modest initiative, distributing school kits to just 20 children. The programme was born from a simple realisation that the impact of serious illness extends beyond the patient. Holistic palliative care must extend far beyond managing physical illnesses. When severe illness confines someone to a bed, the entire household bears a heavy psychological and financial burden. As families become overwhelmed by mounting medical expenses, children's educational needs are often overshadowed.

This year, that small effort evolved into Nallapaadam 3.0, standing as a powerful reminder of collective compassion. The project successfully supported 141 students with brand-new school bags, books, and stationery, bringing joy and confidence to their academic year. Overall, the initiative reached 73 patient families, providing vital relief and reducing psychosocial stress for at least 219 individuals, including patients and caregivers. Beyond the students, we intentionally purchased the kits' umbrellas directly from six artisans living with spinal cord injuries within our community, extending economic benefits and household stability to their families.

We believe in complete transparency with our community. While the project required a budget of over ₹2,00,000 and we raised ₹1,58,641, careful planning and community partnerships ensured that absolutely no registered child was left behind. The initiative also provided a valuable, hands-on learning experience for the dedicated social work interns and volunteers who drove our fundraising and resource mobilization efforts.

As we reflect on this incredible growth and begin envisioning Nallapaadam 4.0, our hope is to inspire local clubs, associations, and community groups to take up similar causes. Together, we can ensure that no child's education is compromised by their family's health battles.

Volunteer Diaries

As an intern, being part of the Nallapadam campaign was a valuable learning experience. I had the opportunity to participate in the planning and implementation of the donation campaign. It was inspiring to see how people coming together can help those facing difficulties.

The guidance and support provided by the Arike team helped me grow both professionally and personally. This internship strengthened my understanding of social work practice, teamwork, and community engagement. I believe an internship at Arike can be a truly transformative experience for any social work student.

Navigating Emotional Ups and Downs

It is normal for patients with chronic illnesses to experience different emotions from day to day, including sadness, worry, frustration, or fear.

- Listen patiently. Allow the patient to talk about their feelings and concerns without interrupting.
- Spend time together. Simple conversations and companionship can help the patient feel supported.
- Encourage enjoyable activities. Listening to music, prayer, reading, or other favourite activities may improve mood.
- Share concerns with the care team if emotional distress becomes severe or continues for a long time.

A Heartfelt Thank You

At Arike, every act of kindness becomes a source of strength for the patients and families we serve. We extend our deepest gratitude to all our supporters whose generosity, trust, and encouragement continue to uplift our mission. Your contributions—big and small—help us deliver dignified, compassionate care to those facing serious health-related suffering.

Support Our Cause

With your support, Arike is able to provide free home-based palliative care services to patients within the Kochi Corporation limits. On average, our team cares for 40 patients every day, ensuring that they receive compassionate and holistic support in the comfort of their homes. Nearly ₹10 lakh is required every month to sustain these services. However, this amount itself is insufficient to meet the growing needs of patients and extend our services to more families in need.

Palliative care is not limited to managing physical symptoms alone. We also support patients and families through medicines, nutritional support, and assistance for the educational needs of children. We invite you to become a monthly supporter with a minimum contribution of ₹500 per month.

Support Our Mission

We warmly encourage you to contribute to Arike, enabling us to make a meaningful and lasting difference in the lives of individuals requiring palliative care.
